Bryan, Tex., Dec. 6 .- Fifty-three scores of others are reported to this. have lost their lives in the floods leys of the Brazos and Trinity rivers in Central and South Central Texas since early in the week. Three thousand persons have been driven to the upper floors of their homes by the rising waters, or have been compelled to seek refuge in trees, where they remained for hours, in come cases for two days, before being rescued. Estimates of the damage generally center around $4,-.000:000.

One of the deepest overflows was in the Brazos bottoms of this section, where beatmen reported no houses visible when they made their final trips before dark this evening.

The floods in both rivers to-night were beginning to enter the last hundred miles of their journey to the gulf. In the remaining territory there were few important towns, but additional drownings in remote settlements are feared.

Several towns which . had been cut off for two days reported to-day, each telling of property loss over wide areas, but of few deaths.

"The Kentuckian" is the name of a new semi-monthly periodical just started at Jackson, Ky., with Mr. Ryland C. Musick as proprietor. The Kentuckian is a beauty, typographically, and its editorial contents are sound and well presented. It announces that its contents will continue to be Timely Topics, Political Reviews and Pertinent Comment. The paper makes a good start and we wish it much success.

The idea of a Presidential Prison in his message to Congress last week is commendable and worthy of adoption at the first opportunity. Such a plan of selecting our Presidential candidates would do away with the long-drawn-out, troublesome and sometimes unfair method which is practiced in conventions and come nearer getting the people's choice. It may be opposed by lobbyists and professional politicians, but is destined to be very popular with the great mass of voters.

The death Col. John H. Whallen, of Louisville, removes a man of varied interests and aspirations. He arose to power and influence mainly through his strong virility and forcefulness of character. Like all men of his type, he had his bitter enemies as well as strong friends. But the best side of his nain dire straits and misfortune.

An eminent professor of psychology of Philadelphia advocates the idea that drunkards can best be cured by an appeal to the spiritual or inner man. The doctor is thoroughly right. There are several liquorcure institutions scattered around over the country, but their "dope" is in a great measure ineffective unless the patient has the moral courage and faith within himself to really want to get cured. In many cases this faith and courage, aided by the earnest sympathy and help of relatives and friends, is all that is necessary. Frequently, however, this latter aid is lacking-more's the pity.

Writing from Paris, France, Editor Watterson, in a recent issue of the Courier-Journal commenting on the present political conditions both here and abroad, says:

How to Detect the Alum Baking Powder

"Which are the alum baking powders; how can I avoid them unless they are named?" asks a housekeeper.

Here is one way: take the can of a lowpriced powder in your hand and read the ingredient clause upon the back label. The law requires that if the powder contains alum that fact must be there stated. If you find one of the ingredients named alum, or sulphate of aluminum, you have found an alum baking powder.

There is another and a better way. You don't have to know the names of the alum powders. Use Royal Baking Powder only; that assures you a cream of tartar powder, and the purest and most healthful baking powder beyond question.

And Will Serve Ten Years in Delaware Penitentiary For Burglary.

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 29 .- The Delaware whipping post was once more in operation to-day. Cornelius C. Street, a dapper young white man, convicted of robbing the home of William Winder Laird, member of the Dupont family, was given 20 lashes on his bare back at the Newcastle County Workhouse. Efforts to have the lashes remitted were futile.

The airing given the post by Representative Evans, of Montana, in Congress, did not help Street. Govwhipping post, refused to interfere.

Notwithstanding that the law specifies whippings shall be in public. Warden Crawford, wielder of the lash, ejected a Press Association correspondent from Washington, who wrote an article about whippings two weeks ago that the Warden did not like.

GEORGIANS PRAISING STRANGE NEW LIQUID

People Who Suffered For Years And Who Never Expected to Get Well Are Fast Recovering and Whole State Is Interested.

So great has been the success of the famous new Root Juice medicine in Atlanta and elsewhere that people all over the State have become interested and reports of remarkable experiences are beginning to come from all directions.

Among the latest and most remarkable cases that have been brought to light is that of Mrs. E. Storm, a well known resident of Marietta. Ga., who has for over six years suffered from stomach and kidney trouble and whom it is said eight doctors and a number of different medicines failed to cure. In speaking of her strange experience with the Root Juice treatment, Mrs. Storm said: "My appetite was poor, my food would not digest and I suffered frightfully. Gas would form in my stomach and cause belching. Sometimes I would become sick at the stomach and frequently suffered from headaches. I had severe back aches and pains over my kidneys. I was weak, rundown and nervous and at times I could not sleep. When I began to hear so much about the new Root Juice treatment I decided to try it and now, after using only two bottles, I find myself greatly benefited. I am beginning to feel fine. For the first time in four years I am able to work about the house, I certainly do not regret and money I two bottles I used have done more for me than all the doctors and medicines I tried in eight years."

Another remarkable case is that of Mr. Joseph Bradner, of Jackson, Ga., whose signed statement says Thanks, &c., whether written at the that after using two bottles of the the behest of lodges, churches or in- juice, rheumatism left him, the swelling disappeared and he feels better than for years.

Reports similar to these coming from all parts of the State seem to per word, straight. This is the smallmedicine is effecting wonderful results in cases of impure blood, rheumatism, weak kidneys, backache, headaches, nervousness, indigestion, belching, loss of appetite, pain after meals and other symptoms of weak or disordered stomach, liver, kidneys or bowels.

It can now be obtained at James H. Williams' drug store, 214 Main street, Hartford, Ky., and in view of the great benefits hundreds of sufferers are deriving every day, it would seem advisable for home people who seek a speedy cure to give it a thorough trial. (Advertisement.)

The Stolen Portemonnaie !

She Forgave the Thief

By LILLIAN SHARPE

A young lady sat in a waiting room at a railway station watching the clock as its hands moved slowly toward the time of departure of her train. Presently she turned to a satchel on the seat beside her, placed it on her inp, opened it and took out her portemonnale, which she laid in the place where her satchel had been.

A young man with curly auburn hair and brown eyes was sitting at the other end of the seat and observed that the girl had forgotten to put her portemonnaie back into the satchel. He kept his eyes on her and it until suddenly a railroad official called.

"Train for Hampton!" The young lady started, glanced at the clock, saw that the hands stood at fifteen minutes before her train time, remembered that trains are opened to travelers some time before they leave and, grasping her satchel, hurrled away. Seeing the words "Ticket Office" over a window, she remembered that she had forgotten to provide herself with a ticket and, turning aside, took position at the end of a line of several persons.

"If that isn't just like a woman!" said the young man with auburn hair to himself, and, reaching for the portemonnaie, he put it in his pocket and followed her, taking position next to her in the line. When it came her turn to purchase a ticket she asked for one Hampton, at the same time opening her satchel. First there was a quick movement of the top articles, then a plunge of the hand down into the bag. after this a convulsive stirring up of

"Oh, heavens, I've been robbed!" "Permit me to pay your fare," said the young man behind her, and, taking out his wallet, he bought a ticket for her and one for himself. Then they both made room for those behind them.

"What shall I do?" wailed the girl. "You had better get aboard the train. You haven't time to investigate the loss of your portemonnaie, and it would probably avail nothing if you had. Was there much in it?"

"Only $7.53, four postage stamps and some samples."

"What exactness! I wish I could remember things like that. Never mind. I have advanced the amount for your ticket. You haven't lost very much. Good morning." And he lifted his hat deferentially.

Now, the young man knew very well the girl would not let him go without asking his address that she might re-turn his loan. She asked him for it, and he said that it would be more convenient for him to give it to her in the train, so the two went on. He handed er on to the car, took a seat beside er and, producing a card bearing his name. Nathaniel Meriweather, wrote his address on it and handed it to her. "Why, you live in Hampton!" she exclaimed. "I don't live there, but I am going

That he was going there was perfectly true, but when he had entered the station he had just left he had no such intention. He was going to his home, fifty miles beyond.

"But you have given your street and umber there."

"That's the address of a friend." The girl put the card in her satchel. and Mr. Meriweather took up the matter of the lost portemonnaie.

'Was any one," he asked, "near you while you were in the station? 'No one near enough to get poss ion of anything that belonged to me. Now, I think of it, some one was sitting on the ether end of the bench hile I was waiting for the train." 'Man or woman?"

"I think it was a man."

"Did you take out your portemonnaie

"Yes, I did. I tired of waiting and ook out this magazine." She still held it in her hand. "To do so I was obliged to remove the portemonnale and some other things which I laid beside After getting out the magazine I them all back again into the bag." 'Are you sure you put them all

A girl can't help being pleased at admiration even from a thief. The young lady instinctively put her band to her back hair.

Not long after this, when the train as nearing Hampton Mr. Meriweather bought it better that he should have young lady's address; he might meet the man who he declared had stolen her pocketbook and if he did it would be essential that he communicate with her. She gave him her name, Alice Deane, and her address. When Hampton was reached Mr. Meri-weather hunded Miss Deane off the train, and they parted. The next day the former received from the latter the amount he had expended for her ticket.

Within a week Mr. Meriweather wrote Miss Deane that he had seen the man who sat beside her in the sta-tion, had shadowed has and learned where he lived. Should he have the fellow arrested? Miss Deane replied that if Mr. Meriweather could induce the thief to return a sample of ribbon there was in the pocketbook he was welcome to the rest of the contents. The next day Mr. Meriweather rang the doorbell of Miss Deane's home and sent up his card. She came down to receive him becomingly dressed, and as she entered the room he held out the missing sample. She received it with some surprise.

"So the man who stole my portemonnaie," she said, "was he who sat beside me in the station?"

"He was."

"And he was quite willing. I suppose to give up the sample on condition that he might keep the other things."

"That was very nice of him." "Was there anything else in the portemonnaie that you especially de

"No; there were only the money, a few addresses and the samples. The addresses I know, and the other sam-

He seems to have admired you." "And yet he stole my portemonnaie!" "You are wrong in permitting him to go free; you are encouraging vice."

"Do you really think so?" "I do, indeed. I consider it my duty. being cognizant of his criminal act, to inform the police of it." "And would he have to go to jail?" She raised her eyes to Meriweather's pityingly. He would have liked to take her in his arms and confess that he was chaffing her, but that time had not yet come.

"Yes; he would have to go to jail. and that would surely make a criminal of him for life."

"Don't do it."

"How would it do for him to come to you, confess his crime, restore the other articles and throw himself on your mercy? You could tell him how wicked he had been and picture to him his end if he continued in crime. Then you could forgive him, and he might hereafter live a blameless life."

"I think that would do very nicely. It would be infinitely preferable to sending him to jail."

Mr. Meriweather left after a two hours' visit, promising to propose the plan he had suggested to the thief and ask if he would consent to make restitution and ask forgiveness. Miss Deane would be advised of the result.

A few days later Mr. Meriweather called and handed Miss Deane the money that had been lost with her portemonnaie, saying that the heart of the thief was slowly softening and he thought that if he could be taken under her influence he might yet make a man of himself. There was another two hours' chat, after which Mr. Meriweather departed, intimating that he bring the penitent with him. Nevertheless it required more calls, each lasting from two to hours, before the gentleman assured the lady that the criminal was ready to confess his fault and ask for-

Meanwhile, as may be supposed, other matters than this proposed reformation engaged Mr. Meriweather and Miss Deane. In fact, one evening aft er a visit that was prolonged till midnight Miss Deane consented that Mr. Meriweather should go to her father to ask for her hand. The suitor, being an estimable gentleman and a good catch, received the required consent. and the couple became duly engaged.

A short time after the betrothal Mr. Meriweather announced to his flancee that the next evening the penitent thief would call upon her to restore the vemainder of the stolen property, listen to a lecture on his dishonesty and receive her forgiveness. When the appointed time came round there was a ring at the doorbell, and a man in an ulster, wearing a heavy beard and was admitted to the Deane residence. Miss Deane came down, and the stranger in a broken voice said:

"Pardon me for a miserable sinner." He bowed his head and waited.

"I have been told that this is your first criminal act." said the girl, "and I sincerely hope that it will prove your last. You may have a sweet heart, and think how glad you will make her by your reformation. You are forgiven.

The man threw off his ulster, tore away his beard and his glasses, and her lover stood before her.

"The confession." he said, "comes after your forgiveness. You left your onnaie on the seat in the station, and I picked it up. I did so for an excuse to make your acquaintance and prolonged the deception to win you."

Miss Deane stood thunderstruck for a few moments, then turned and was striding indignantly out of the room when the penitent caught her around the waist and held her despite her struggles to be free till she recovered

"You have forgiven me!" cried her "You can't go back on it." But she did go back on it, and it was two long days before she repeated the forgiveness spoken to the supposed thief. She does not even now, ten years after the episode, refer to it pleasantly.

Cause of the Coldness.

In his reminiscences James Stuart, a former lord rector of St. Andrews' university, tells a story of a Fifeshire man who was helping him with some engineering work in an English town.

One day he mentioned to Mr. Stuart that he had changed his lodgings, and Mr. Stuart asked why. "There's a kin o' cauldness sprung up between me an' the man I was lodgin' wi' afore," he said. "How is that?" Mr. Stuart asked.

"Weel, they hae some very curious words here," he said. 'What kind of words?" Mr. Stuart asked.

The man explained that in Fifeshire they spoke of "the ribs of a grate," not "the bars." and he went on: "It just come aboot this way. I was sittin' wi' a bit chisel in my hands afore the fire, and I wanted to soften it in the fire, so I said to the wife, 'Will ye just let me put this in yer ribs?' And wi' that she gied a skirl, an' in comes her man, an' she says tae him that I want it to pit my chisel in her ribs. So there's been a cauldness between him an' me since."

Repartee of Begging.

A traveler in London was set upon by a persistent Irish beggar, a shiftless looking fellow, but with the blarney wagging tongue of one gifted. The beggar followed the traveler, mouthing sweet nothings and lies.

"An' sure, yure riverence, it wasn't that I was ever like this," he said. "It's often I've heard me mother say that we was noble by rights an' that one of the family once wore the crown of Ireland, sir."

"Well, what do you want?" asked the traveler. "Would you have the crown back? I can't give it to you."

The Irishman sidled a bit closer. "An 'arf a crown 'd do. sir." He got it.-New York Post.

He Had the Most-Perhaps.

A comic actor who had been engaged to entertain a family party at an English country house proposed at the conclusion of the performance a little game of his own. Each of the company, himself included, was to stake half a crown, and the pool would be taken by the person who possessed the most of the articles which he (the comedian) would inquire for. On his assurance that he would take no mean advantage, but run the same risk as the rest, all the members of the party consented, and between £3 and £4 was soon laid on the table. The actor added his piece to the pool, with a cunning smile, and then said:

"Now, which of you ladies and gen-tlemen happens to have the greatest number of false teeth?"

Deathlike silence reigned for about a minute, then a burst of laughter, in some cases hearty and in some cases

"I have three." continued the actor, pulling them out. "Who has got more?

Wile of the Congressman Who Used to Wear a Bald Head.

One public official in Washington is known to wear a wig-no, I will not mention his name. He is not of the age when he should be wearing a wig. He returned to a session of congress with nicely waving locks instead of being sparse atop. It was so cleverly done that all the baldheaded men wanted to know at once what remedy he had been using, and it looked so like a case of some hair restorativeor hair conservative-that the cloak room was agog over the wonderful success he had achieved.

Now, the same congressman's bald head had been the butt of unfortunate jokes for several sessions, and he thought it was time for revenge, so gathering together his now admiring colleagues he told them in a confidential way that he had at last found a real remedy. He said it was a private prescription and he would do them a favor and get some for them. Bottles were brought, plain and fancy. Some even brought milk bottles to get a sufficient quantity. Many paid $5 and $10 a bottle for the new restorer. Then the officials began vigorous work upon their scalps.

It was not until some weeks after that the secret leaked out-they had been rubbing salt and water on their heads, while the joker had received more than enough to pay for his handsome wig, which is now the admiration of many social functions and which he wears with equanimity and dignity. He says that no longer is the head uneasy that wears a wig and whenever wig is mentioned among that coterie of good and faithful who invested in hair remedy they agree with Dr. Wiley that pure wig protection is needed for guileless congressional wags.-National Magazine.

In the younger days of Mr. Bodkin. K. C., a man was charged with murder at Clare assizes. The prisoner and the witnesses were all peasants who could only speak Irish, and the proceedings had to be conducted through an interpreter. Just before the trial the prisoner's brother approached a leading barrister who knew Irish and invited him to defend. The great man, however, could not take the case, but he said: "I have a young friend who knows Irish well and is an excellent lawyer. He'll see that the interpreter doesn't play any tricks. His name is Bodkin.
